NOTE:

Most entries categorized as "Essential History" (-A/) are for one of three purposes:

- A. Determine value of stock inventory.
- B. Determine when replenishment required.
- C. Identify major consumers.

As a result, the types of debits, and types of credits, can be greatly reduced. Those considered significant for separate identification might be:

- A. Issues to foreign governments.
- B. Reimbursable issues from stock or direct as accommodation action.
- C. Loans to or from other government activities.

This brings up another point, reduction in number of identifying FAN's which now identify PRA. One UAD (previously CIC) may have several fans for several projects. OL/SD would have no interest in history of project use--only identity of UAD.

The compilation of history on issues in terms of dollars depends on what we want:

- A. If the only need is to determine stock inventory balance and ROP requirement, quantitative issue history is the minimum requirement.
- B. If it is desired to evaluate dollar inventory turnover to determine viability of inventory (true requirement vs issue as excess vs disposal as unserviceable or Presumption - $ value of stock is required although issue may not be costed to customer. A = Essential History b Borderline History Regmt c No history reqmt.
